"The Evening World's" exposure of the usurious practise of a dramatic agent made something of a sensation. It was discussed on the Riaito with considerable zest. Actors had been chaing at the ill-treatment for a long time, but they were afraid to take any steps to stop the annoyance. One mild youth went to the agent soffice yesterday and asked if he could borrow any money. The exclaimation uttered by the agent would not look well in print. "You can't borrow a cent from me," he said when his indignation nad calmed down. "I try to accommodate actors, and they retailate by giving "ne away to the papers." . . .

Tony Farrell, who belongs to the ranks of what are known as Irish comedians, has been adopting strange tactics in Chicago. In his play "Garry Owen" there is a murder near a church, and the solemnity of the proceeding is supposed to be heightened by music furnished by the choir. Mr. Farrell advertised for Catholic church-choir singers and didn't get a single answer. He declares that he is going to do this in every town that he visits. Church-choir singers in Chicago happen to be very well paid.

Yet not a word was said to me about the wreath, and all the information I have on the subject has been gleaned from the newspapers."

"I should like an engagement very much." said a fluffy-haired soubrette yesterday, to a dramatic agent. "What sort of an engagement?" was the brusque query. "Oh, anything," she replied, sweetly. He began at the little house in Twenty-fourth street, now known as Hoyt's, and he is now the proud possessor of a handsome house on Broadway, and of another in Leicester Square, London, Mr. Daly might look happier than he does, but a discontented expression is probably the sign of a further reaching ambition.

sign of a further reaching ambition.

There is a little singer of catchy songs at the American Roof Garden named Madge Ellis who has shown considerable talent. She introduced a new song a few weeks ago called "My Fearl's a Bowery Girl," and it is now being whistled about the streets. The song is of the east side, set to lively music, and although it is in east side vernacular there is a bit of pathos running through it. It is a difficult thing to popularize a song, but Miss Ellis has done it.

He never spoke to any one. The peasants held him in awe. Evil stories were current about him. They may have been true. For Yann there was but one law—the word of his master; but one long that for his gun.

When the evening tea had been drunk, the Prince, making a pretext of having some orders to give, took leave of the sax twenty-fave, and she was only having kissed his wife's hand, with drew to his own apartment.

A half hour later he went down into the garden.

There everything spoke of love. Oppressed by the heat of the day, the plants and flowers had blossomed once more into life, filling the six with their heavy fragrance.
